the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999). The number of people aged 85 and over has increased by 0.5 million.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for ageing, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on three main principles: (1) to ensure that older people have the opportunity to live independently and actively; (2) to ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need; and (3) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity.

The strategy is based on the following assumptions: (1) that older people are a valuable resource; (2) that older people have the right to live independently and actively; (3) that older people have the right to access the services and support they need; and (4) that older people should be treated with respect and dignity. The strategy is based on the following objectives: (1) to improve the lives of older people; (2) to ensure that older people have the opportunity to live independently and actively; (3) to ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need; and (4) to ensure that older people are treated with respect and dignity.

TRANSITION

The loss of the freshmen class of Crown Point High has caused several changes which students noticed every day. The halls, which two years ago were nearly packed solid, now offered students and faculty more room as they change classes in five minute periods. The wait for a hot cafeteria lunch wasn't the torture it used to be. With smaller lunch hours, the cafeteria staff could feed the line of hungry students in shorter time. Clubs and organizations experienced smaller memberships. The one thing that a smaller student body didn't alter at Crown Point was the great school spirit.

With fewer students in the school, its appearance and function were altered. Smaller classes provided a closer working relationship between student and teacher and a greater chance for the student to voice his own opinion in class. Teachers could take more time for individual attention when a student was in need of help or advice. A smaller student body also gave the guidance department and the administrative department a chance to work more closely with each individual. The reduction in number of those enrolled at Crown Point High has enabled the school to form closer links of understanding between the staff and the students.

An energetic student could improve his skills, compete in athletics, or just enjoy watching these activities through the noontime intramurals. Whether it was a brain-taxing chess match or a tiring basketball game, each student found the activity suited to him. Care-free students utilized their noon hour dancing to the tune of the "Beatles" or "Monkeys."

During the year's transition, the sports department gained two new coaches to build the school's winning seasons and teams.

In the morning, the parking lot and bicycle stand filled as students arrived for school. Gradually the halls became crowded and the drinking fountain inaccessible as students lingered before class. At 11 o'clock the students rushed for a place in the lunch line or a seat at a table. Here they ate a hot meal, their own lunch or goodies from the concession stand. Some ventured uptown for their lunch. The noon hour also provided time for students to study or to get supplies from the bookstore.

At three o'clock the students poured out of classes and headed for home by cars, buses or walking. Fifteen minutes later everyone was gone and the halls echoed with silence. The cars and bikes were gone until the next morning.

Decreased enrollment because of an absence of freshmen has reduced the size of the many school organizations and classes. If you glanced into room 212A on a Friday afternoon you would see a stack of unsold Inklings. Many lockers once shared with other students now beg for occupancy. These lockers not only house calendars, mirrors, and pictures of friends.

Sunshine girls had only a limited patronage at the coat checking station and various other society activities. The reorganization of Student Council increased its membership because every roll room was represented in the Council plus the fourteen representatives elected in May. Although most clubs were smaller they compensated for this with closer working relationship with each other as shown by the CPHS booster club.

This year Crown Point High students were actively engaged in international as well as domestic affairs. Wilfredo Llaury from La Punta, Peru, was our exchange student sponsored by the American Field Service. Wilfredo lived with the Robert Veaches and their two children Diane and James. His chief interests and hobbies were pool and scuba diving. He jokingly added American girls to his interests. Wilfredo was introduced to his new environment through the help of a twenty-member student committee at the high school.

Several Crown Point students had the opportunity to study in Europe last summer with the Council for Study Abroad. The eight-week program included two weeks of orientation here at school and six weeks of travel and classes in France and Spain after a short stay in England.

Hours of planning, weeks of committee work, and final minutes of preparation all added up to a memorable Homecoming. The festivities began the night before the game with the traditional bonfire and snake dance. After the jubilant students wound their way around the square, many attended the Powder Puff football game in which GAA girls played flag football and comical male cheerleaders led yells.

Enthusiastic spectators were repaid for their chilly hour on the bleachers when our team presented a victory over Gary Edison. The theme "Cherish" prevailed at the dance where students mingled in anticipation of the crowning of evening's royalty. After the royal court assembled on the stage, the coronation of Mr. Football and his queen completed the traditional festivities of another Homecoming at Crown Point.

Cindy Sendak adds finishing touches to her make-up before the production of "One Foot in Heaven".

As juniors, members of the class of 1967 displayed their acting talents in the presentation of "One Foot in Heaven". This play concerned a small mid-west town in 1910. Elderly women of the town created many problems for the new preacher (Jerry Hampton) and his family.

As seniors, they joined forces to present "Hope Springs Eternal". In this comedy the old folks were investigated by a Social Security Department Representative (Jeff Wilkinson), who found them becoming pathetically senile.

Lights, make-up, props, costumes, and many rehearsals under the direction of Richard Gordon, created the feeling of acting during their first performance.

The coronation of royalty added anticipation and pageantry to many club-sponsored dances this year. At each event, the crowd looked forward to the reign of the chosen candidates as the highlight of the evening. The Holly Hap Queen candidates were chosen by members of each class prior to the dance and the Queen was voted on by all those who attended the Hop. The Hi-Y and the FFA chose the candidates for their clubs' sweethearts. Girls in the Sunshine Society nominated other club members in their respective classes to vie for the title of Rose Queen in the spring. Prom royalty candidates were named by the members of the senior class to reign at the most formal and gala event of the school year.

Of the many Crown Point High students who participated in the National Merit Scholarship program, four seniors attained the finalist status. These seniors well represented our school and their class.

Seniors experienced that one unique year in their education that they will long remember. Realization that they had reached the "top" created a feeling which mixed accomplishment with anticipation. The year of hard work and shared fun terminated with having cap and gown measurements taken, sending out announcements and invitations, and attending many senior parties and open houses. The final moment of high school came at Commencement as seniors waited for their diplomas to be distributed.

Developing and molding the young minds of students was one of chief goals of all faculty members. Without as many students as in previous years more time could be spent with individuals. Curriculum changes and smaller classes also the routine of most students. Interest was aroused in the varied courses from computing logarithms to auto mechanics.

Class room activities seemed to be the most important, stressing that hard work and ambition would bring reward in the future lives of all those preparing for college or for business.

writing experiences

The English Department emphasized the development of skills in reading and writing. Grammar courses strengthened writing ability. Students in these classes studied sentence structure, punctuation, and spelling. Literature courses widened the horizons of the students in several areas. Through daily exercises and projects, students of the English language learned the keys to better self-expression.

Highlights of the senior English classes included a study of early and medieval literature and a traditional reading of Shakespeare's play Macbeth. A general review of grammar and a study of expository and descriptive writing were also included in the senior classes. One of the biggest projects for the fourth-year English students was the composition of a term paper on the author's philosophy of life.

Juniors read one or more of three novels: The Scarlet Letter, The Red Badge of Courage, and The Bridge of San Luis Rey. Such widely varying books presented a challenge to the students. They analyzed plots, characterizations, and writing styles. A term paper was also required of junior English students.

Sophomores used vocabulary words to develop cross-word puzzles. They studied new transformational grammar and reviewed the traditional grammar principles. They selected twentieth century books for their reading list.

Calculus course furthers comprehensive math program

Students with accurate and scientific minds could enroll in one or more of the various math courses offered at CPHS. Goals of the math department were to produce individuals capable of solving simple and complex problems in daily living and to apply mathematical principles to situations in college and in the professional world.

Logical thinking was taught to students through various math courses. Math students became acquainted with both traditional and modern math. Introductory algebra students familiarized themselves with the number line, equations and sets. Geometry students learned the principles behind theorems and postulates through proofs and applications. With this background, students moved on to advanced algebra, a comprehensive study. Senior math taught the fundamentals of trigonometry, calculus, and statistics. A calculus class taught by Mr. Saylor was added to the math curriculum this year to provide a challenge for interested, hard-working senior math enthusiasts. Many math scholars entered state and national math contests and often ranked high. Commerce students took business math in which basic principles of arithmetic were reviewed.

Science inspires students' imaginations

Health classes gained a fundamental knowledge of human anatomy through practical study and application. A basic and essential element of any science class is laboratory work which was recently incorporated into the study of biology as a mechanism to show students ways to observe problems related to their environment. With chemicals and lab apparatus, the biology student had an opportunity to command procedures that had long been demonstrated by the instructor.

The sound of clashing test tubes and the odor of freshly prepared sulfur compound greeted chemistry students on lab days. These busy young scientists could be seen gathered around lab tables attempting to produce the correct chemical compound. Daily lectures were also important to the study of chemistry, the science dealing with the composition of matter.

With a background in biology and chemistry, seniors ventured into physics class. After becoming familiar with the laws of matter and energy, senior physicists applied these principles in practical experiments.

Students who selected general science learned the basic principles of science. Last summer, senior Mike Goodman was chosen to attend the eight week National Science Foundation Program in Life Sciences at Purdue University. During this course he concentrated on an intense study of histology.

Social studies department stresses citizenship

Above: Mr. Gruber lectures a World Geography class on locating positions on maps. They must then proceed with an assignment that will increase their knowledge of global affairs.

The objective of the social studies department was expressed in one word—citizenship. A responsible, well-informed and active citizen was measured by the effectiveness of a social science course.

By being required to complete one year of U.S. History, juniors had the opportunity to obtain an appreciation for the heritage, duties, and goals shared by all Americans. Included in this course was a complete study of the wars involving the United States, the development of our country, the Constitution, and many other important documents which were drawn up by our founding fathers.

Civics and economics concerned seniors with both theoretical and practical application of knowledge in objective fields of social studies. In civics, the students studied the fundamentals of citizenship, local and national politics, and elections. Civics also created an interest in national and foreign current events. Econ students learned about the economic history and function of the United States.

Electives which were chosen in the field of social sciences are world affairs, world geography, and world history. These additional courses were available to any student who wished to improve his knowledge of the world.

The foreign language department offered two Romance languages, French and Spanish, and the classical Latin. Students of foreign language could begin or perfect the language of their interest, as both beginning and advanced courses were available.

Spanish students built their skills by the use of dialogues and taped experiences. They not only studied the language, but they also learned about South American culture and tradition. At the end of the year Don Quixote was discussed and some selections of the novel were read. Advanced classes were able to branch into the geography, history, literature, and customs of Spain as well as South America.

Although Latin classes have been reduced in size, the beginning class was still offered. Second-year students were involved in translating the works of Caesar and his commentary on the Gallic Wars. Advanced classes studied The Aeneid and Cicero's orations against Cataline.

Through memorized dialogues, French students acquired correct speech patterns. In addition to these dialogues, speech patterns were learned through poems, jokes, Christmas carols, and folk songs. French students realized that French is a practical language when they read Passe-Partout, a French current events magazine.

Explaining the perplexing difference between purpose and result clauses, Miss Swartz tries to get this point across to Latin students.

Students plan for

Home economics students were taught the basics of being useful and skillful planners of home-management. The girls learned how to improve personal appearance, train for future professions, understand basic principles of nutrition, and how to be efficient homemakers. In the laboratory courses of the home economics department, girls made slipcovers, refinished furniture, and planned attractive meals. The climax of the year was a style show in which each girl displayed the garments she had made during the year.

Majors in home economics could take advantage of all courses offered by the department. New courses were set up to offer interested girls not majoring in home ec an opportunity to learn about clothing and nutrition. A semester course teaching family living was found interesting and profitable by most girls.

While the girls were busy in the kitchen, the boys learned several skills and techniques in industrial arts classes. Courses were available in architectural and mechanical drawing, and wood shop. Industrial arts majors also had the option of studying machine shop, auto mechanics, welding, and electronics. Boys working in the well-equipped shops occasionally made items used by other departments of the school.

vocational training

The industrial education department program served as an extension of the exploratory courses of industrial arts offered in junior high school. The aims of the courses were to help students gain understanding and skills of industrial machines, processes, materials, and products. Students interested in industrial education selected courses from five units shops.

Wood shop students worked in the well-equipped and spotless shop on projects varying from book racks to desks and chairs. Students also took tours through Peer Cabinet Company and local furniture stores to gather extra knowledge. Machine shop students also worked on equally specific projects. Classes were two hours long because more time was needed to form metals and more subject matter could be covered in the extra hour. Having purchased new machinery, the machine shop was one of the best equipped shops in this area.

Students interested in farming or in related agricultural occupations enrolled in either vocational agriculture or in summer horticulture. Last year a "pilot" program was established in horticulture at CPHS to meet needs of those students wanting to specialize in landscape, nursery, ornamentals, or home improvement.

Each driver's education student had to acquire a driving permit before he began the course. Then he learned the fundamentals of how a car operates and how to drive it properly and safely. Not only did each student have the opportunity to drive during the class period, but he also saw movies which showed improper driving skills, in which he had to find the mistakes. Students also did a study of the parts of a car and their functions. With six hours of driving experience and twenty-one hours of class, the student was prepared and eligible to receive his operator's license. The driver training department's goal was to produce young drivers capable of making the right decision at important times.

All sophomores were required to take physical education courses. Through these classes, they developed muscle coordination and improved their health. Classes offered this year provided fun and skill-development as well as basic exercise. A physical fitness test based on national findings was given in the fall and repeated in the spring to give a comparison of strength and flexibility before and after participation in the school's physical education department.

Crown Point students not only increased their academic knowledge, but they also learned to express themselves in the field of fine arts. Art and music classes were among the most popular courses offered at the high school as they presented any interested and talented student a chance to develop and perfect his creative ability.

Art, one of the elective fine arts courses, helped the individual student discover his talent through the use of tempera, charcoal, and oils. Advanced art classes participated this year in a contest sponsored by the Illinois Bell Telephone Company. At Christmas time, art students continued their yearly tradition of decorating the picture windows near the intramural area. Another unique project of the art department was the construction of a paper mache mascot honored at home games.

Music, the other fine arts course, offered instruction for those interested in either the vocal or instrumental line. Vocalists spent their time practicing together for student convocations and various programs. Courses offered ranged from folk-singing to A Cappella. Instrumentalists also spent long hours polishing their numbers for concerts and contests. Constant band practice was a key to the production of a fine high school organization.

Several clubs and organizations experienced smaller memberships this year due to the absence of a freshman class. This, however, did not deter the ambition and spirit of CPHS's extra-curricular activities. Larger clubs such as Sunshine Society, Hi-Y, and Booster Club took advantage of their smaller memberships to create new ideas and committees to include every participant. Smaller special interest groups found it easier to be more unified and active and to make more special trips and excursions. Each club member had the opportunity to play a more active and important role in the or-

Organizations

Transition

Student representatives modernize handbook,

The newly revised Student Council completed its first year of activities as a larger and wider-branching organization. The Council, composed of at least fourteen members from each of the three classes, met every other Friday. A supplement to these meetings was regular rollroom meetings in which representatives had the opportunity of discussing current issues with their rollroom members. With this new approach, students of CPHS had more of an opportunity to voice their ideas and opinions directly to the Student Council.

The Student Council was busy this year with several revisions of its functions and branches. A separate committee was set up to revise the student handbook which gives accurate information to incoming students. This committee also worked on bringing the dress code up to date. Another committee was formed to remodel the Student Council office, where students stopped often to discuss issues with Council members or to claim lost articles. The office became a convenient place for weekly Council activities to localize.

As in previous years, the Student Council presented two two-hundred dollar scholarships to students taking courses leading to a college degree. The Safe-Driving Committee, headed by the Vice-president of Student Council, stressed the importance of careful maintenance and operation of all students' cars.

Student government stress leadership,

Elected the previous spring, class officers led their respective classes in major projects throughout the year. Aside from leading class meetings, collecting dues, and heading class committees, the officers also met occasionally with student council representatives and class sponsors to make major decisions and plans for the year's activities. Senior officers helped in preliminary voting for cap and gown colors and announcements, juniors organized the prom, and sophomores chose their rings and class sweaters.

The recipient of this year's DAR Good Citizen Award was Melinda Jewart. She was chosen after two rounds of voting by classmates and faculty on the basis of dependability, leadership, service, and patriotism. Melinda then took a test to determine the Lake County winner, who then went on to state competition. In the spring, she and representatives from other schools were honored at a meeting of the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, where she received a pin denoting her achievement.

Last summer, nine Crown Point students represented our school at the week-long Boys' and Girls' State convention at Indiana University. These students learned about government and citizenship by setting up mock governmental sessions and taking active part in campaigning and elections. Living under the supervision of counselors, they were taught citizenship and ethics as they vied for leadership.

For each school month, three boys were selected by the administration, guidance personnel, and members of different academic departments to serve as Junior Rotarians or Kiwanians. Chosen principally on the basis of leadership and scholarship, these boys attended the weekly meetings of their organization and at the last meeting of the month spoke on the activity, sport, or academic area they represented.

Last spring 15 per cent of the senior class and 5 per cent of the junior class were inducted into the National Honor Society. Members were chosen on the basis of leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Honor roll students attended a Caribbean Halloween party which featured a native island prince. The Society held two Christmas parties. One was for honor roll students, while the other was a special party for graduate members of the organization. Students who had achieved honor roll status all grading periods received certificates at the spring party. A dance and bake sale provided revenue for the club.

Four seniors attained the rank of National Merit Scholarship Semifinalist. These students scored in the top one percent of all who took the nation-wide qualifying exam.

Outstanding journalists who had served two or more semesters on the Inklings or Excalibur were eligible for the Quill and Scroll International Journalism Honorary Society. Members were inducted at the annual Publication's Banquet in May.

Language clubs further interest

Members of Le Cercle Francais furthered their study of the French language and culture with several meetings, trips, and projects. A trip to Chicago to see famous French singer Charles Aznavour was made in the fall and a swimming party was held in January. Meetings included lectures and slides of France by students who had studied in Brittany the previous summer. The students presented many facets of French life to the club through interesting stories. Demonstrations of French cuisine added spice to occasional meetings.

With two of the advanced Spanish students having participated in a study abroad program the previous summer, the Spanish Club learned many exciting and interesting facts about Spain. The Sociedad Linguistica Del Espanol was active throughout the year. A Sadie Hawkins party began its activities. The club attended a Mexican Folklore Ballet in the spring and ended the year with its biggest event, the second annual Spanish Fiesta.

This year the Latin Club presented to its members the opportunity to study in Italy for eight weeks. It was the first time that the Honors Abroad Program had been offered to Latin students in Crown Point. Members of the Junior Classical League combined studies of the Roman Empire with the language. The club held its annual Cena Romana, or Roman Banquet, in April. This banquet was held in honor of the seniors who had taken two or more years of Latin, with first year students serving as their slaves.

Projectors, tape recorders and record players were made available to teachers by the Audio-Visual Club. Members of the fairly new organization delivered equipment to assigned rooms and showed all of the films.

Science enthusiasts in the Biology Club met bi-monthly to work on projects and to study various phases of biology. Among its activities, the club took blood types of its members and hosted a speaker from the Gary Heart Association. The club set up a new program with the grade schools. By keeping in contact with science teachers of the lower grades, the club supplied the elementary science classes with visual aides such as posters and specimens.

A hayride in October began the Art Club's many activities. In November, a well-known local painter, Louis Dimitrov, gave a presentation on the development of art and on portrait painting during which he actually painted an oil. The Christmas season saw Art Club members working on decorations for the school's windows. The club also went to see the Nutcracker Suite Ballet in Chicago.

An organization open to all those interested in any phase of medical careers was the Health Careers Club. The organization hosted a guest speaker this year and offered films on various careers in medicine. Trips to Mercy Hospital and to the Lowell Animal Hospital highlighted the club's activities for the year.

Aside from monthly business meetings, members of the Future Teachers of America were kept busy this year grading papers and aiding teachers with their time-consuming work. The organization also helped in the concession stand during games. Membership dues helped afford a scholarship at the end of the year for a senior boy or girl who had contributed the most to the club and its cause.

Future Farmers of America, organized on national, state, district, and local levels, began its activities even before school began in the fall. Members attended the state convention chapter educational and recreational tours, and a leadership camp. They took part in poultry and livestock judging and horticultural projects throughout the year. In the Spring, the boys were honored at a district banquet.

Teflon pans, sewing machines, and family living were topics of discussion when the Future Homemakers of America met bimonthly this year. The club held a hayride, a Halloween party, and went Christmas caroling. Members sold fruit-cakes to earn money for their annual mother-daughter banquet at which new members were initiated.

In its fourth year, the Future Business Leaders of America continued to introduce the responsibilities of the business world to its members. The club visited two Chicago radio stations and attended the state convention.

Whether selling candy or making Christmas decorations, the members of the Crown Point Sunshine Society were a frequent and welcome sight around school this year. Although membership fell due to the loss of freshmen, the enthusiasm of the members never dwindled in their work to aid others. The year began with a candlelight initiation ceremony in which over thirty new girls were taken into the Society. Sunshine's next big event was the collaboration with the Hi-Y to sponsor Bundle Day in association with the Save the Children Federation. In mid-November, the Sunshine Society undertook its candy sales again and sold over sixty cases of taffee bars and crunch, with the proceeds donated to the Reilly Memorial Children's Hospital. Also in November, the Society and Hi-Y held the annual Sunshine-Hi-Y Semi-Formal. The Rose Dance in April was the last social event presented by this active organization.

The Sunshine Society initiated several new programs into its activities this year. One of the most popular and the most appreciated was the Ideal Lady Program. Each girl chose a woman whom she respected most to be her Ideal Lady. Throughout the year the girls sent small gifts and cards to their ladies but did not reveal their identity to them. In April, the Ideal Lady Tea was held and girls made themselves known. Also new to the program this year were two active standing committees, the favors committee and the S.O.S. (Spreaders of Sunshine) Committee.

To fulfill their purpose of serving others, members of Hi-Y were active this year with many helpful projects. As in previous years, they again collaborated with the Sunshine Society in the fall to sponsor Bundle Day. During this clothing drive, both organizations together collected close to seventy-five bags of clothing for needy people in the Appalachian area. In addition to Bundle Day, the Hi-Y also helped out at all home basketball and football games by directing fan traffic and by helping to fill the parking lot. They also sold tickets for reserve games. The Hi-Y chose Debby Mattson as this year's Hi-Y Sweetheart at the semi-formal dance sponsored with the Sunshine Society.

In January, several Hi-Y members attended a legislative conference at Manchester College. Then in spring, several of the same boys attended a larger mock legislative assembly in Indianapolis.

The Lettermen's Club, organized to honor major letter winners, acquired over forty new members this year. Sponsored by Mr. Kyes, the club assisted regularly at basketball games and sponsored a spring dance in co-operation with the GAA. The Lettermen also sold advertisements and put together programs for both football and basketball games. Several members of the organization served as ushers at the three performances of the Cool Pool Capers. The club terminated its activities for the year with its annual banquet. Leading the club this year were officers, Dave Hodge, Joe Kacmar, Bill Lamb, and Terry Paarlberg.

Bundle Day brings many Hi-Y boys to CPHS to collect clothes for children in the Appalachians. Carrying in bundles are Terry Costin and Doug Haniford.

First powder puff game and Booster club activities highlight homecoming

"Cowman's Cowards" plan last minute strategy before the start of the powder puff football game.

This year's Booster Club presented a small but spirited and successful block. The 130 red-and-white-caped girls displayed their organized cheers and their sportsmanship at every home game and at taurneys. New this year was the formation of a card section and a paper mache mascot. Our "new" Crown Prince George was designed and constructed by the art department.

With several committees of Booster Club members working hard on their various tasks, this year's Homecoming proved to be one of the best in years. The block was also successful in winning the Christmas Taurney booster block trophy for the fourth year in a row.

With its largest membership in years, the GAA was a very active and fun-filled organization. They presented their first "Powder Puff" football game to add to Homecoming festivities. They now hope to make the game an annual event. GAA girls participated in weekly spats here at school and in "Playdays" in which they competed against other schools. The newest branch of the GAA, the Girls' Gymnastics Club, completed its second year of competition.

Activities of Drama Club meetings included improvisations, poetry readings, and demonstrations of applying makeup and play staging. In November, one of the club's many trips to I.U. Extension was to see the Ploy "Medea". Members also traveled to Valparaiso University to see presentations. At the Quill and Scroll Variety Show, the Drama Club presented several improvised scenes. In April, members of the club gave the performance "Many Moons" by James Thurber for grade school children. The club ended its active year with an awards party.

The Chess Club, which was reorganized in 1964, completed its third year as a CPHS club. Members of the club spent time perfecting two outgrowths of the basic game, the four man chess game and the three-dimensional chess game. The running of their annual tournament for interested students and the sponsoring of their first high school dance highlighted the club's activities for the year.

The Speech and Debate Club participated in many events beginning in October and continuing through March. Speech meets and debates took place on alternate Tuesdays throughout the year along with occasional Saturday meets. The club attended a student congress at Purdue University in December and sponsored its own legislative assembly which included American history and civics students from the high school.

New swing groups

This year saw three new branches of the A Capella formed. The new Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs were composed of old and new members of the A Capella Choir. An avid interest in folk-singing inspired the creation of a folk-singing group, which was a very popular outfit at its presentations. These new groups were added to the traditional A Capella Choir, the year-old Madrigals, and the Swing Choir for several concerts and programs throughout the year.

The A Capella began its year with its annual A Capella Preview in the fall. In December, the Choir presented its Christmas program with the Symphonic Band. The A Capella also carolled through the halls of the high school on the last day of school before the Christmas vacation. The same evening they went carolling at several rest homes and then met at a choral member's house for a party.

The Choir participated in the District Choral Contest in February. The competition consisted of two divisions. All contestants used the same music and all those winning first place went on to state competition. Several county contests kept the A Capella moving throughout the year. The Choir presented its annual Spring Concert in March. The operetta in April wound up the A Capella's performances for the school year.

The choral director, Miss Karen Cowman, completed her second year at Crown Point High this year. She directed all branches of the Choral Department and chose members in the early fall.

A Cappella swings in "Bye Bye Birdie" production

Changing the traditional pace of operettas, the A Cappella presented their first contemporary musical comedy, "Bye, Bye, Birdie." Voices, costumes, and lights were the basic ingredients united for scenes and times which lingered in the minds of all. The two-night production presented a hilarious approach to the teenager admiration of a pop singing star.

The light-hearted musical, "Bye, Bye, Birdie", captivated its audience with comedy and color. The story itself revolved around the romance of a composer-publisher-agent, his secretary, and the draftee, rock-and-roll star, Conrad Birdie. The fun began when Conrad's manager, played by Tim Dickenson, decided that one teenage fan should be chosen to bestow a final kiss on their idol before facing rough army life. From the millions of fans throughout the nation, a sweet and innocent 15 year-old girl from Sweet Apple, Ohio was chosen. Kim MacAfee, played by Mary DeLaughter, was torn between the love for her steady and the glamor and fame of the star, portrayed by John Mecklenberg. Miss Rose Alvarez, played by Cindy Morris, was also having problems for she was in love with the manager, Albert Peterson, but his mother constantly made situations difficult for her. Kim MacAfee's parents were also topsy-turvy with the problem of housing the big star during his stay in Sweet Apple.

The story and the production appealed to both parents and students. The song "Kids" presented the old question of "what is wrong with these kids today". "Telephone Hour" was a colorful and active scene which portrayed the enthusiasm and vigor of gossiping teenagers. Other songs, such as "One Boy", and "How lovely to be a Woman" added swing and the mood to the entire production.

"Salute to Cole Porter" routine

The crowd sat on the edge of their seats as they saw the famous Crown Point Marching Bulldogs come around the bend of the track. As the 1965 champs were announced, the crowd went wild. The ecstatic cheering was lulled only during the performance and then burst back into pandemonium as the Bulldogs marched on past the grandstand. Hours of drill and exhausting practice came to a close in three short minutes. A moment for a last check, a deep breath, a whistle, and suddenly ranks and files came pounding past the spectators. Notes converged to form familiar tunes from the score "Salute to Cole Porter."

Bandsmen eagerly awaited their hour of glory when the defending state champions won second place in the 1966 State Fair high school band marching competition. A proud director, Mr. Guth and Drum Major Jeff Wilkinson accepted the second place trophy. Again the town turned out to greet and congratulate the successful bandsmen when they returned to Crown Point in the evening.

The band also represented the school in several summer parades. Football season found the marchers drilling for half-time routines. Precision steps and fine music aroused enthusiasm as did the patriotic presentation of the colors.

Cadettes, Twirlers complement band performances

With smart new uniforms, colorful shakers, and gleaming batons, varsity Cadettes and twirlers added to the pomp of the famous Crown Point Marching Bulldogs. Led by Drum Major Jeff Wilkinson and feature twirler Michelle Tagg, the Cadettes and twirlers marched at several events throughout the summer and at home football games in the fall.

At the beginning of the summer, the leaders of the Cadette corps were faced with the problem of an unexperienced group of marchers. As the summer progressed and the long hours were spent perfecting routines, however, the corps proved to be one of the best-looking groups in the area. Varsity Cadettes went with the band to band camp in the summer to work on the State Fair routine. With their high steps, precision routines, and flashing smiles, the girls helped to capture the second place trophy in the early fall.

Throughout the winter months, the Cadettes performed at concerts and basketball games with fancy dance steps and different color shaker combinations. Then in the spring came the tryouts for the next year's corps. Girls trying out were judged on marching ability, appearance, and ability to execute precision dance steps.

Concert Band competes in solo, ensemble

As the marching season came to a close, bandmen looked forward to a busy winter of practice and performance as a concert band. Skill and musicianship were constantly required and utilized throughout the year during concert band season. Preparing for their various performances such as concerts and contests, the instrumentalists practiced many hours perfecting their numbers. With the onset of concert band season also came rehearsals of the Dance Band.

Individuals found expression with music when they competed in the NISBOVA Solo and Ensemble Contest. Combined efforts brought the bandmen together when they entered the NISBOVA Concert Band Contest.

Concerts came at Christmastime and in the early spring. The band performed for students of Crown Point High at some of the convocation assemblies during the year. The professional assistance of Raphael Mendez aided the student performers in rounding their musical appreciation. The decision to give a John Phillip Sousa concert brought the recognition of the John F. Kennedy Center of Arts in Washington D. C.

Without seniors, underclassmen played for graduation and acknowledged the strength of several sections.

“Inklings” staff

The “All American” rating from the National Scholastic Press Association Critical Rating Service received by the Inklings two consecutive years set high standards for this year’s staff. To maintain this standard, regular columns including Athlete of the Week, Personality Plus, and Perspective were added to the paper. These columns were created to generate student enthusiasm and interest in the paper. Special six-page issues published for Homecoming, Christmas, and Sectionals were other additions to regular production.

Summer journalism institutes held at Indiana University and Ball State University provided preparation and experience for many Inklings’ editors. What was learned at these institutes aided in the publication of the 32 weekly issues printed this year. The staff found it necessary to observe a regular Wednesday evening ritual to assure Friday publication. The Inklings is not only received by the students but is mailed to many CPHS graduates attending college. A nation-wide newspaper exchange provided for sharing of ideas among schools.

Bulldog license plates were sold by the Inklings as a money-making project. The Inklings and Excalibur staffs also jointly presented a humorous variety show which featured a silent flicker created by a group of fun-loving teachers.

“Excalibur” staff rushes

Preparations for the 1966-1967 Excalibur began long before school started, when Judy Florchak, Editor-in-Chief, and Cindy Sendak, Assistant Editor, travelled to the Indiana University Journalism Institute for two weeks of study last summer. Other new techniques and skills were developed by the staffers at the National Scholastic Press Association Convention last fall in Chicago.

Judy selected the 1966-1967 cover early in October, from several grain and color samples from the S. K. Smith Co.

For many weekends, the sound of typewriters could be heard as the staff rushed to meet their deadlines. Countless hours were spent making page layouts, choosing and cropping pictures, writing copy blocks, and headlines. Wading through total chaos, armed with pica rulers, countless pictures, 3-R forms, proportionrulers, cokes and grim determination, the staffers attempted to portray the story of the people, activities and spirit at Crown Point High School.

In October, the Excalibur staff was thrilled to receive a first-class rating from the N.S.P.A. for the 1965-1966 Excalibur. Yearbooks from all parts of the country were graded on content, layout and quality of pictures. First-Class is the second highest rating a yearbook can receive, All-American being the highest.

Crown Point High School, has now become a recognized center of sporting events in Northwest Indiana. During the past year Crown Point hosted the cross-country sectional, the basketball sectional and Big Four Tourney, the wrestling sectional, and the gymnastics regional. Bulldog athletes were caught in the wide revision. Positions on the coaching staff were filled with qualified instructors. They inspired the minds of all Bulldogs while encouraging sportsmanship and fair play in interscholastic competition. These traits will follow the students throughout life.

gains skills at clinic

The school year of 66-67 brought many changes to the varsity cheerleading squad. The cheerleaders gained a bright spark as the "new" Crown Prince George helped them shout out the traditional Bulldog Chant before every third quarter. Miss Patterson, the new cheering advisor, helped and worked with the girls throughout the year.

Besides summer practices, the varsity yell leaders traveled to an all-day clinic to improve their skills and to develop new ideas and techniques. Three weeks later, the squad competed against cheerleaders from all over Indiana and received very high rating from the United States Cheerleaders' Association judges. The girls' new sailor uniforms were especially recognized by the judges.

For their services, the varsity cheerleaders were presented with red wool blazers purchased by the Lettermen. These blazers were proudly donned every Friday to promote spirit and sportsmanship in preparation of each game. In appreciation for her help and time, the cheerleaders presented Miss Patterson with a dozen red roses at the annual Civic Club Football Banquet and later gave her a red blazer identical to theirs.

Hardballers struggle

Crown Point's varsity baseball team finished below its expectations for the 1966 season with a 6-8 record. Having only six major letter winners returning from the previous season, the Bulldogs were plagued by inexperience, and although it had strong potential, the team just couldn't seem to click together.

The hardballers won their opening game with Clark, but failed in three subsequent contests against Noll, Lowell, and Hobart. A highlight of the season was the match with Highland, as Crown Point blasted out 11 runs. Led by Terry Fricke's six runs batted in, and a three-run homer, the team finally gained a morale-boosting victory.

Another bright spot of the season was a one hit shutout against East Gary by pitcher Jim Gentleman and dropped a tough one to Griffith on a rain soaked field. In the game at Calumet, senior John Schmelter smashed two round trippers in a losing cause.

One of the more outstanding pitchers was junior Jack Pettit, who in 42½ innings, struck out 73 opposing batters, an average of 1.7 batters for every three he faced. Senior Don Carnahan led the Bulldogs in batting, collecting 14 hits for a .341 percentage and also led in runs scored with 9.

Don Carnahan was the sole member of the Crown Point team to be chosen for the All-Conference Squad. Awarded Honorable Mention were catcher Dave Hodge, infielder John Schmelter, and infielder Mike Stillson.

The 1966 Crown Point reserve baseball team found the going rough. The reserves dropped the first game to Columet, but followed through in fine fashion by tying Lowell and defeating Chesterton and Lincoln. The remaining games with Dyer, Merrillville, and Lew Wallace were unsuccessful for the Bulldogs, as they lost each game by only one run, but then rallied to tie Lowell and to defeat Chesterton and Lincoln.

Hub linksmen take conference title

The 1966 Bulldog golfers marked up their first undefeated season with a 19-0 slate. This record was a perfect finale to the coaching career of head linksmen Pete Bellesis.

The season figured to be a rebuilding one with only one returning letterman and a covey of talented but inexperienced golfers waiting to fill the gap. Showing amazing depth and consistency, the linksmen rolled over opponent after opponent. Their successes culminated in winning the Calumet Conference crown.

The Bulldogs opened the season with triumphs over River Forest, Hobart, Gary Roosevelt, and E. C. Roosevelt. The conference season saw victories over Griffith and Chesterton followed by the lowest team score of the season, 151, against Wirt and East Gary. The golfers experienced little opposition until the meet with the young Highland team. After ending in a tie at 175 strokes, the last ball score of Crown Point and Highland decided the match, and the Bulldogs' 36 won over a 39 by the Trojans. The linksmen ended the regular season downing Dyer and Gary Edison in a triangular meet, thus bringing the Conference championship to Crown Point.

Cindermen lose nine seniors, develop

The cindermen of 1966 achieved an admirable record for a rebuilding year. The track team lost many strong runners through the route of graduation in 1965, so the underclassmen proved to be the mainstay of the team. The experience garnered by the 1966 thinlins should prove very valuable for the future. The strength of the squad was in its depth, rather than in a few outstanding individuals. This can best be shown by the Bulldogs' excellent 4-1 record in dual meets. Their one loss was to the powerful Warriors of Columet. The Bulldogs made a highly respectable showing in the total number of multi-school meets. After taking a second place in the Crown Point Indoor Invitational, the squad was plagued by injuries and was forced to settle for fifth place in the Little Five, the Hobart Relays, and the Hammond Relays. The highlight of the season was undoubtedly the tracksters' second place finish in the Columet Conference Divisional. The Bulldogs tailed off as the season closed by finishing tenth in the sectional, but then rallied to close with a very respectable sixth place in the Conference finals.

Two individuals of the Bulldog squad established new school records in 1966. Cole Viers, a sophomore, leaped 21' 1 3/4" to set a new long jump record. Scott Shafer achieved a new mark of 1:57.9 in the half-mile run. Shafer had only one mar in his season: A potential state finalist, Scott was disqualified on a technicality in the half-mile run in the sectional.

finish second year with 4—2 conference record

Love, 15, 30, 45, game were new sounds heard at Crown Point as tennis was added to the sports agenda. The Bulldogs ended their second year with a 7—8 record. Under a new coach, Michael Ross, and with no returning lettermen the Bulldogs nearly broke even for the season.

The team dropped its first three meets, as their inexperience hampered them. Having set their goal toward a winning season, the team rallied by defeating the Griffith and River Forest netmen.

"They improved by 100% at mid-season," commented Coach Ross as his team quickly became formidable opponents for the area's top tennis teams. With only three seniors on the squad, the netmen developed poised attacks in the first three singles matches and strong doubles combinations. Their record against conference teams was an outstanding 4—2.

Highland was the last team to beat the Bulldogs. This loss was followed by a winning streak, defeating Griffith and Highland. The highlight of the season was a 4—1 victory over tough Hammond Tech.

Hub gridders defeat Munster in closing

The 1966 Crown Point gridders set the best record since 1963. The squad showed great spirit and teamwork. The season began as the Bulldogs defeated Calumet and Lake Central in the Football-o-Rama. Stunned after dropping the season's opener to Merrillville 20-0, the Bulldogs bounced back to defeat Lowell. They lost to Chesterton 14-13 in the last 4 minutes.

A huge crowd saw the Panthers come from behind to tie the Bulldogs 19-19. The next game saw the Bulldogs at their best. It looked like a homecoming loss when Edison left the field at half time with a 6-2 edge, but in the second half the Hub gridders exploded for five touchdowns and scored a 37-6 victory. The next game pitted 16th ranked Munster against Crown Point. Again the Bulldogs were behind at the finish of the first half, and they were seen to come from behind for a 20-13 win. In the last game Crown Point fell to Wallace, ranked second in the state, to complete the season with a 4-4-1 record. Pete Horst and Dave Hodge were named co-captains and Hodge was voted most valuable player by his teammates. The only team member elected to All-Conference was John Carter, while other teammates made honorable mention.

The reserve gridders finished their season with a 0-6-1 record. Their first set-back came at the hands of East Gary, followed by a J. V. defeat from Merrillville. In their last game the Bulldogs were knocked off by the strong Hornets of Lew Wallace.

Cross-Country boasts 15—1 record

Crown Point's 1966 cross country team consisting of mostly juniors, turned in an outstanding season. The harriers achieved a 15—1 record in dual meets, losing their only meet to Calumet, the defending state champion. Led by junior Warren Johnson, whose average time was 10:15, the team added the sectional championship to their previous victories. This was the first time in the school's history that the harriers have carried home such an honor.

One week after the Hobart Invitational, in which Crown Point placed 7th, they travelled to the same course for the conference meet. The harriers came in second to Calumet by 41 points, with the third place team 54 points behind them. In the sectionals run on the Yauche Country Club course, they placed 3rd, 7th, 9th, 14th, 18th, 20th, for a total of 51 points. The second place team was 76 points behind with 127 points. The harriers went on to place 7th in the LaPorte Invitational. Their final meet of the season was the Regional at LaPorte, where the team, then consisting of one senior and five underclassmen, placed fifth and missed qualifying for the state cross country meet by only two team places. At the end of the season, senior Jerry Kacmar was named captain of the team.

Endurance and perseverance are important to harrier, Jerry Kacmar, in order to maintain his lead from his inexorable competitors.

Roundballers post excellent season

"Hoosier hysteria" in its most colorful fashion swept Crown Point High School and one of its best basketball teams in history. Coach Harry Allison's Bulldogs ended regular season play with a 18-4 mark and an excellent chance to be best ever. The season included wins over highly-regarded Griffith, Valparaiso, Bishop Noll, Merrillville, and Highland.

The Red and White opened the campaign with 7 straight wins before being upset by Griffith in the second annual Big Four Tourney. Revenge was in store in a 75-64 conference triumph over Griffith following the great blizzard which upset the schedule.

In the Noll game at Hammond, senior Jack Pettit tied the all-time Crown Point High School scoring record with 36 points. His 18 field goals in the game was another all-time Bulldog high. Other seniors from the defending Sectional Champs to be lost via graduation were Bob Bieker and Cary Stump.

In the Sectionals, the Bulldogs avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of Lowell by stopping their rivals 72-61. The Bulldogs advanced to the semi-finals where they were upset by the eventual Sectional champions, Griffith by a score of 80-64.

Merrillville tourney

The Bulldog reserve basketball team impressed Crown Point fans and foiled the prophets with a sparkling 13-7 season mark. The pre-season predictors had expected a poor campaign but were in for a surprise.

All seven losses were close contests that could have gone either way. They were to Gary's Horace Mann and Emerson: highly-touted Griffith and Valparaiso; Chesterton, Bishop Noll, and Hammond Gavit.

The highlight of the season was a tourney championship over Griffith and arch-rival Merrillville at Merrillville.

The forces of Coach Russ Marcinek handed Lowell's Red Devils their first defeat 66-47 at Lowell's gym. The next night Lake Central was crushed 55-27 by the Red and White.

In a well-played game at Noll's fieldhouse, Bob Morgan scored 34 points in a 65-55 defeat. Ironically, this came on the same night as Jack Pettit's record 36 points for a varsity victory.

Whiting also felt the strength of "Beaver" Marcinek's "little beavers", 57-25.

Crown Point's junior varsity was made up entirely of sophomores which often had to battle against juniors on the opponents' teams—which made the winning season even greater.

Eleven gymnasts qualify for state

In his first year as head of the gymnastics team, Coach Mike Ross concentrated his efforts on building for the future. The team had a 5-7 season, placing 2nd out of 7 teams at the sectionals.

The bulk of the team consisted of juniors and sophomores, all having great potential. Leading scorers for the season were juniors Ed Lenz, John Beigle, and Larry Hittle. Sophomores Gary Kubal, Sonny Dusich, and Jeff Hammett showed the greatest promise of all the younger team members. Junior Bill Bratten proved to be the most outstanding competitor on any single piece of apparatus, as he dominated the side horse in nearly every meet.

In the sectional, Bratten won first in his event, as did Lenz on the high bar and Geeze on the still rings. Other team members qualifying to compete in the state finals were Larry Hittle who copped 3rd on the rings and 5th on the parallel bars; Ed Lenz, who took 1st on the high bar and 2nd on the parallels; and Gary Kubal, who took 5th in free exercise. Dusich placed 3rd in all around to qualify. Also qualifying were Blanchard, Licina on the side horse and Beigle on the trampoline. Haskell also qualified on the trampoline.

Crown Point grapplers ended the 1966-1967 wrestling season with a final record of 9—4. The Bulldog grapplers also took fifth in the Columet Conference and ninth in the IHSAA wrestling sectional even though several of the Bulldog's top performers did not participate because of injuries. Sophomore, Rich Bohnen in the 112 pound weight class, placed second in both the conference and sectionals while senior Duane Mitch placed third in both meets. Junior Jerry Lear also ranked third in the sectional as did Steve Greer in the conference.

In regular season dual meets, the Bulldog's first encounter was with Highland whom they defeated by a 23—22 score. Next came Hammond Noll and Merrillville who also fell to the Bulldogs. Crown Point's record was broken by a tough Lowell team who gave the wrestlers their first defeat. The Bulldogs then defeated Chesterton, lost to Lake Central and Griffith, and overcame East Gory and Gory Edison. After dropping a match to Gory Andreon the Bulldogs then won their three remaining meets. Senior Dave Hodge was not able to complete the season this year due to an injury received during football. Hodge was sectional champ last year and was favored to retain his crown this year. Next year Crown Point has seven returning lettermen and anticipates another winning season.

Students break everyday monotony by competing in intramural activities

Many energetic students found noontime intramurals the perfect change from a routine daily schedule. Intramurals offered recreation, competition, and a chance to visit with and "work" with friends for half or all of the lunch hour. Besides the many students, some faculty members also enjoyed joining in the competitive recreation. Through the intramural program, students developed interest in and perfected skills in various phases of athletics.

One of the most vigorous and popular intramural sports was basketball. Both boys' and girls' teams were formed and games were played for half of the lunch hour. Coming out on top this year were the "Little Lovers" after playing a tough match against the "Hawkeyes". Volleyball was also a popular sport, as mixed teams provided laughs as well as serious competition. Other team intramurals included badminton, baseball, soccer, and tug-of-war. Many of the intramural sports were conducted in round-robin or double elimination fashion.

Some of the intramurals required more skill and brain-power than actual physical exertion. These were chess, checkers, skiddles, and table tennis. As these sports have grown in interest, increasing numbers of tournaments have been arranged in recent years.

Corridors seemed less crowded as the transition and reorganization of city schools took place. Seniors no longer had freshmen to command. All students held the Bulldog spirit high. Organized activities combined efforts of many students emphasizing student pride; yet, class spirit rose tremendously to the sound of the "battle cry". Friendship grew, and among members of one's own class life long memories were made. The enthusiasm of learning prevailed as students found laughing ways to ease tensions.

Classes Transition

Reorganization

Robert J. Brannock, superintendent of city schools, has the responsibility of reviewing the credentials of all prospective school personnel.

Secretary for Mr. Brannock, Ruth O'Neill, assumes the tasks of filing, recording and typing all materials distributed by the superintendent's office.

Assisting students in scheduling classes and making future plans are Eric Kroon, sophomore counselor, Helen Palmer, senior counselor, and Annie Wood, junior counselor.

One of the many activities of Assistant Principal Roger Childress is reading the daily announcements on the public address system.

poses problems for administration

Reorganizing the school system kept the administration busy this year. Mr. Robert Bronnock found his job as superintendent of city schools becoming increasingly difficult with the freshman class being at Toft Junior High and the high school with only sophomores, juniors, and seniors. The ideals for more efficient schooling and expansion which he and the school board proposed last year were finally made a reality.

Mr. Ray Rogers found his job as principal no easier even though the enrollment had dropped 400 students. As chief administrator Mr. Rogers still had to cope with enforcing school policies, helping teachers and students, as well as arranging speakers for assemblies and other administrative duties. Assistant Principal Mr. Roger Childress kept busy with Student Council activities, disciplinary tasks and many extra responsibilities which his job demands.

The Guidance Department was busy as always with students and their problems. During the year, students consulted their class counselors for scheduling conflicts, personal problems, state examinations, job openings and college entrance.

Director of Attendance Charles Lehner and Assistant William Naylor discuss the number of students absent during the winter months.

Personnel keep school

Crown Point's janitorial staff, cafeteria help, and school nurse were busy during the year keeping the school clean and the students well-fed and healthy.

Aiding the faculty and students at all times was the janitorial staff. It kept the entire school clean and orderly, repaired broken light fixtures, thermostats, and faulty plumbing. The janitors maintained the fine condition of each room and hall in the building by cleaning the boards, sweeping the floors, and burning the trash.

Busily preparing the well-balanced, tasty, and hot meals for the students and faculty each day were the cafeteria cooks. Their preparation began at an hour when most students and teachers were finishing breakfast. By 11:00 the cooks were ready to keep a steady supply of food both lunch hours.

Besides keeping serious health problems in check, the school nurse gave incapacitated students disability passes and handled all emergencies with efficiency. The nurse was always ready to take care of minor injuries and also to give the seniors their tuberculosis tests in preparation for college. She also created a student interest in medical careers by heading the Health Careers Club.

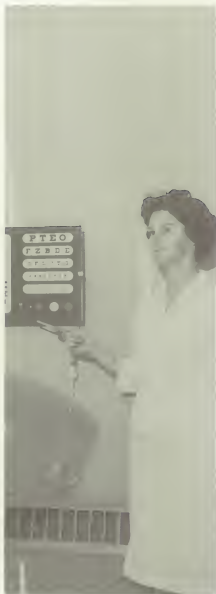

Custodians, E. Chenoweth, S. Wood, J. Lampher, J. Larsen, A. Fricke keep the building in clean and good working order for students and staff.

Crown Point
business district
reflects good times as local merchants remodel, prosper,
move to better
locations . . . thus . . .

The success of a community is measured by its ability to conform, to adapt, and to expand in order to meet the demands and needs of its citizens. Crown Point has worked to keep in pace with its growing population. Modernization of its stores, construction of public utilities, and expansion of business are just a few of the projects our city has been working on. Raising finances for a swimming pool and forming committees concerned with teens have been Crown Point's contributions to its youth. Our community has proved itself an important factor in developing young lives.

Excalibur 1967 draws to close, relates changes in year of Transition

WE ARE FINALLY FINISHED was the comment made by the Excalibur staff as we proceeded to clean up the mess from our last deadline. The left-over layouts sheets, broken pencils and pica rulers were all being discarded or saved for next years staff. The office usually cluttered with papers strewn everywhere was now immaculately clean. Now all there was to do was await the final results of all the hard work on weekends to assemble a history of the year.

As the final pages of the 1966-67 yearbook are submitted, we feel that we have done our best to convey all the year's "hustle and bustle" that goes into making-up o school year. As we know each year is made of new people, personalities, better or worse athletic teams, or old and new titles. All these combine to make a certain kind of year. I hope we have included in the Excalibur all the events that made this year so special.

Judy Florchak—Editor-in-Chief
